

C. 175. e. 1. (7.)

PUBLISHING by SUBSCRIPTION,
STEELE'S ESSAY upon GARDENING.

CONTAINING a Catalogue of most of the Exotic Plants at this Time cultivated in the Stoves and Green-Houses of the British Gardens,—The Plan of an elegant capacious Stove with the latest Improvements,—The best Method of Planting the Hot-House Vine,—A Description of proper Earths for keeping in high Preservation every tender Exotic,—Observations on the History of Gardening, and,—A Contrast of the Antient with the Modern Taste.

By RICHARD STEELE,
of Thirsk, in the County of York.

Since finishing the above Essay the Author has, by particular Request, been induced to write the Propagation and Culture (from real Practice and Experience) of each Plant in the Catalogue comprised in the above Essay,—To point out the best Method to preserve Seeds, &c. for a whole Year or upwards, in a State of Vegetation, with a View to bring over the most valuable Sorts from the East and West-Indies, and other remote and hot Parts of the Globe; and to give the Plans and Elevations of two Green-Houses upon very large Scales;—one of them after Mr. Salisbury's Green-House at Chapel Allerton, near Leeds, in the County of York; and the other, an Elegant Design in the Ionic Order, that may, it is hoped, be admitted with Propriety into the highest-finished Pleasure Ground.

The Subscription for the BOOK and ADDITIONAL MATTER, is 1l. 1s. in Boards.

To be paid for upon Delivery of the Work.

(Quarts.)

Sir,

On Behalf of my Son I venture to solicit your Name to a Publication explained by this Inclosure.

The Labour and Attention of a Father has been exerted, and shall still be united with the Endeavours of his Son, to render the Work useful to the Public.—The Book will be ready about the latter End of next April; and should I be so fortunate as to obtain your Approbation, it would be deemed the most exalted Honour: And in that Case, with all Humility, I shall hope for the Honour of a Line.

I am,

Sir,

Your most faithful servant.
